WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, NOV. 17, 1852.

From Italy rumour says, that his Holiness appears to be upon rather hopeless terms with the Republic of New Grenada, if we are to judge from the tenor of his harrangue in the Consistory of the 27th September, He complains of the ingratitude of that State for the benefits of Gregory XVI., who recognized its independence; of iniquitous laws against the rights of the church, subjecting priests to lay tribunals, abolishing tythes, and instituting freedom of worship. All which he protests against, as well as the law of May 1851, prohibiting monastic orders, the expulsion of Jesuits, the abolition of ecclesiastical tribunals, and nemination of curates by the president of the republic. His Holiness laments the sacrilegious war waged by the New Grenada government against the church, threatens to visit his apostolic severity upon those prelates who obey the new laws respecting parochial examinations and lauds the courageous resistance of the Archbishop of Santa Fe de Bogata. Other laws, which after all are very similar to those prevalent in Piedmont, Belgium and France, "the eldest daughter of the church" are loudly protested against by His Holiness, who warns the rebellious government of the pains and censures due to profaners of sacred things, and usurpers of the rights of the church and the apostolic see, concluding with a hope that they may be inclined by Heaven to listen to his admonition, and so afford a fresh triumph to the church. Meanwhile the minister of New Grenada has lowered his arms and left

At the meeting of the New York Historical Society, the Rev. Dr. Abbott, who has been in Egypt and principally in Cairo, presented a gold ring weighing about three English sovereigns which had been found in the tomb of a high priest, on the south side of the great pyramid of Loupon, who was the Cheeps of Herodius, and the second Pharach of the fourth dynasty. It is believed to be the signet of Cheops himself. Its date was upward of three thousand years before Christ, and the beauty of the engraving of the hieroglyphics could only be seen by the means of a microscope, and could not now be surpassed. So say the newspapers, but 8,000 years B, C. would be 600 years before the flood, and we are not aware of an Egyptian dynasty of that early date, whatever may have been the condition of the arts and sciences. Doubtless Tubal cain was an instructor of artifices in gold as well as in brass and iron.

The beautiful appearance of the autumnal foliage, often induces an enquiry as to the reason of the change which a few frosty nights make in the green livery of our trees and forests. The question is purely a chemical ene. When the tree or plant is in full activity, its foliage absorbs carbonic acid and disengages oxygen. When, now, though the influence of sufficiently low temperature, or from any other cause, the functions of vegetable life are suspended, and the fluids cease to circulate, the leaves no longer disengage oxygen, but, in common with all dead bodies, abserb this gas, which, forming an acid, changes the colors of leaves either to yellow, red or some intermediate shade, depending upon the quality of the matter present in the leaves.

"We are not now prepared to say whose fault it is that ruffianism has recently prevailed to so great an extent. At present we blame neither legislation, judges, prosecuting officers, sheriffs, bailiffs, nor jurers; yet we shall feel it incumbent on us to watch carefully the administration of all officers to whom the guardianship of our persons and property is committed. We shall take the liberty to track the captured felon through all stages of his progress, from the constable to the penitentiary or gallows, and whoever may falter in escape the censure which such truckling conduct properly demands.

GEORGETOWN, Nov. 17-12 m In the Georgetown Advocate of yesterday, we liscovered an article copied from the National Intelligencer, purporting to be a statement of the trade upon our canal for the month of Octoberand lest this statement should make a false impression abroad in relation to the canal, we feel it to be our duty to say that the amounts of most of the articles therein named falls short at least one half, if not more, the actual amount for that time. Doubting the correctness of the statement, we have taken pains to make some inquiry into the matter, and find upon examination, that the amount of produce of different kinds upon which freight was paid at the collector's office, in Georgetown, (which is not over two-thirds of many of the articles named,) for the last fifteen days of October, is fully equal to the amounts given in the above named statement. Our object in making this statement, is not for the purpose of disputation, but that all parties may have full justice done them.

The days grow strange, the nights grow cool, The bees have left the clover: The maple droppeth in the pool Its shady summer cover: All day the swallows southward flit, All night the wind sighs dreary, And through the thin veil over it The moon looks wan and weary

The crisp leaves rustle on the path That slopeth to the meadow, The oak beside the lily-pond Drops down its naked shadow The bared boughs at eventide On upland fells keep swaying, And doleful sounds through valleys wide At lonely hours are straying.

Three summer months to warm the heart, And then the chill frosts after-Three summer moons to dream of love-Some ninety days for laughter; And then the South doth end its reign-The north-winds clip our dreaming-The shadow droppeth once again, To end Love's empty scheming.

There is no strip of summer blue But winter clouds blow over, There is no inch of sodden turf The white snow shall not cover; No pleasant thing but has its end When sunny days are waning, No note of music for the lyre But endlessly complaining.

The Slave Case in New York

Our readers are already aware, (says the Rich nond Dispatch,) that Judge Paine, of the Superior Court of the city of New York, has decided that the eight slaves, belonging to the wife of Jonathan Lemmon, of this State, are free under the laws of the State. Lemmon was on his way to Texas with these slaves, with the intention of settling there, and took them on board the steamer City of Richmond, for the purpose of transportation. That vessel, touching at New York, a habeas corpus was taken out, and the decision was as we have said. The Judge cited a number of cases to prove that they were free under the law, which we have not the space, nor do we think it necessary, to republish. The result is, that Lemmon has been plundered to the full amount of the money which the slaves would bring in marever, insert the following extraordinary train of reasoning, for the especial edification of those who have hitherto believed that they held their slaves of the law of nature, and see how they are respectively to be dealt with according to that law; for it will be remembered that the master can now claim nothing except by virtue of the law of nature. He classes under that law a right to pass through the country. That is awarded to him. But he claims in addition to take his slave with him; but upon what ground? that the slave s his property. By the same law, however, under which he himself claims, that cannot be; for It was stated in the Sun of this morning the law of nature says that there can be no pro-

We must look still further to see what is to be captured here. We are informed by an officer done with the claims of the slave. There being have all his rights under that, as well as the master; and it is just as much the slave's right under that to be free as it is the master's to pass ed a house in the Northern Liberties last night, through the country. It is very clear, therefore, that the slave has a right to his freedom, and that the master cannot have a right to take him with him."

The Constitution of the United States expressly says that " the citizens of each State shall be enzens of the several States." Yet, in defiance of this plain and positive provision, the property of a man, living in one State, is annulled in another, and he is voted to have no privileges and immunities in the last mentioned State. Surely, what by the Constitution of the United States is prop erty in Virginia, may, under this clause, be carried through New York. Otherwise, that provision is of no earthly value.

What has the law of nature to do with this matter? By the law of nature, the earth is common to all the inhabitants thereof, and if it be proposed to apply it in one instance, why not in all? It was precisely because the law of nature would not suit an artifical state of society, that municithe same moment, but was fortunate enough to pal law was introduced, and wherever it comes it takes the place of the former law. By the law of nature, all men are equal. But the laws of many of the States recognise slavery, and the property in them. But a State undertakes to set the Constitution at defiance, and the Judge who pronounces the decree under its laws, resorts to the law of nature to sustain him.

It is time that the Southern people should exactly understand their rights in this particular. There can be no more reason or justice in depriving Lemmon of his slaves, than there would be in depriving Judge Paine of his riding horse, should

This speech, which came under your frank, and consequently by your order, has, I suppose, been sent to others of my brethren whose names and addresses have been copied from the same published list of the clergy from which my own was taken. As you know nothing of me, I acquit you of any design to offend me personally. You have only offered a general indignity to those ministers of the Protestant Episcopal Church whose homes are in the South. In the abuse of the franking privilege, you have sought to obtrude the most obnoxious sentiments, expressed in the most offensive manner, upon men who would have refused to hear them from your own lips. Men of the world deem this conduct insulting; and I am yet to learn that an injury is any the less aggravated by the fact that the sufferers are forbidden to retaliate. We can only protest against such treatment. Whether our remonstrances are to be heeded by one who wantonly despises the patience not only, but the safety of the nation, is for you to

My own observations, during a residence of twelve years in Massachusetts, convinced me that charity to the fugitive slave demands that he be returned to his master.

A careful reading of the Holy Scripture on the subject does not permit me to doubt that it is my duty, as a Christian minister, to insist upon the obligation of masters to their slaves. This I do. Nor do I hold back any part of the counsel of God. I teach slaves that they also are bound by Christian obligations to their masters—obligations from which they are not released by unkindness and frowardness on the part of their masters, supposing them to be "unkind and froward," which is rarely the

Were I living in Boston, and should a fugitive slave come to me for protection and assistance, he should certainly have both-protection against the arts of demagogues and fanat-ics, who, having used him for their purposes, would leave him to starve; and assistance to return to that condition in life in which alone he can be truly happy. I would undoubtedly do all that man may do to make a Christian This being accomplished, it would need but little argument to convince him of his duty as a Christian man-to go back to his master, and by increased diligence, zeal, and industry, to restore fourfold, if it were possible, whatever loss may have resulted from his running away. This seems to be the rule of ac-tion prescribed by Holy Scripture in such cases. It certainly was the course pursued by St. Paul; and, so far as I am informed, the Protestant Episcopal Church throughout the United States acknowledges no "higher law." Another course may be more popular with people whose applause you seek, but we have been taught that "that which is much esteemed among men is abomination in the sight

You must have known our views and feelings upon this subject, and therfore, by caus-ing the document which I now return to be forwarded to us under your frank, you have deliberately and grossly insulted the entire body of our clergy.

For one, I feel it deeply. I do not like to be exposed to such impertinences. Still more deeply am I grieved by the thought that our labors for the benefit of the slave population are in any degree liable to be hindered by the interference of women, children, and men, who have not the least responsibility in the matter; who, looking beyond the moral and social evils that lie at their own doors, are willing, for the gratification of a morbid or hypocritical philanthropy, to overthrow the ordinance of God, and involve the whole country in ruin.

Having thus discharged my duty, I hope to be troubled no more by you in relation to these subjects. Should it ever be in my power to render you any Christian service, you may be-lieve me "Your servant for Christ's sake."

On Monday morning last, a pair arrived in our city, and might have been seen wending their way to the residence of one of our ministers—one of the pair a young and verdent looking youth, and the other a lady of whom one could well say, comparing her to the intended groom, what he did not know she could teach him; for she was old enough. After much trouble, the young man had found the place where to get the 'papers to marry by,' and the twain were Soon bound in the 'silken chords, of matrimony. In the afternoon, they were promenading Baltimore street, when the young man's father un-expectedly made his appearance—having just ar-rived in the cars—and collaring his son, told him to leave that 'gal' and return home. 'You are too late, father,' answered the son, 'I am married.' 'Eh! what! married are you; take that,' and the youth's check received the open hand of his father. The old fellow pulled and tugged, finally succeeded in seperating his son from the bride, and the two started down the street. Arriving at a pump, the old gentleman took a drink of water, and again collaring his took a drink of water, and again collaring his son, he proceeded on his way, followed by a large crowd of men and boys. Near the public square, he lectured his sen upon the sin of running off and getting married against his consent, and concluded by slapping his jaws, when a crowd interfered and separated them. The son started in a full run up street, when the bride perceiving him clapping her hands with joy, and running to meet him, they clasped hands, and started in a gallop, and the last seen of them, they were going down the Baltimore pike followed by a going down the Baltimore pike followed by a crowd of little boys.—Cumberland Telegraph.

THE BEST COUGH SYRUP IN THE

IN BOTTLES AT 50 CENTS AND $1.

For Coughs, Colds, and Consumption?

The great demand in Europe and this country for Dr. Rose's Celebrated Cough Syrap, or Expectorant, has induced him to make agents in every place for its sale. Physicians knowing it to be no quack medicine, but a preparation, the result of 80 years practice, are using it in their practice in preference to all other preparations for lung affections, and the thousands who have, and are now using it, pronounce it the very best preparation for allaying all irritation, or Inflammation of the Lungs, and curing, in a rapid and effectual manner, the most stubborn Coughs, Hourseness, and difficulty of breathing. Having practiced medicine very extensively in the city of Philadelphila the past thirty years, I have made Consumption, that Lion of Diseases, and all lung affections, a source of great study. And I sm pleased to say that persons from all sections of the world, who have consulted ms, and used my Cough Syrup and other medicines units in stating their lives have been prolonged, and thousands have been cured of Consumption, by following the directions laid down in my "Medical Adviser," which book can be had free of charge at the Drug stores of Z. D. Gilman, Charles Stott & Co., Samuel Butt, J. F. Callan, F. C. Callan, W. H. Gilman, Charles Stott & Co., Samuel Butt, J. F. Callan, Kidwell & Lawrence, Washington city, D. C. J. L. Kidwell, Georgetown, D. C., and at the various Drug Stores in Alexandria. upv 16—dtl. For Coughs, Colds, and Consumption!

DANCING ACADEMY.

DANCING ACADEMY.

M. R. E. F. GIBBONS, late of the city of New York, has opened a school in Temperance Hall, on E street, on Wednesday, November 10, 1852, for hadies and children at 3 o'clock p. m., and gentlemen at 7 o'clock p. m.

Mr. G. learns all his pupils with such unusual success, that, after five private lessons, he has them all to meet and perform in assemblies. He hope parants will avail themselves of this opportunity by sending their children to be taught those accomplishments necessary to fit them for genteel society.

For further particulars see Mr. G. at Temperance Hallon the days and hours above-mentioned.
